- (a) to ensure that relevant information about occupational health and safety is shared between employers and workers; and
- (b) to ensure that workers are given the opportunity to express their views on, and to contribute to the resolution of, occupational health and safety issues at the workplace; and
- (c) to ensure that the views of workers are valued and taken into account by the employer.

30 Duty to consult

An employer must consult with workers to enable the workers to contribute to the making of decisions affecting their health or safety at work.

Examples of issues on which an employer is required to consult

- 1 The identification of risks.
- 2 The appropriate risk management measures to be adopted at a workplace.
- 3 The facilities to be provided at a workplace for the health and safety of workers (including the provision to be made for first aid).
- 4 Monitoring the health of workers and their fitness for work.
- 5 The provision of information and training for workers.
- 6 Changes to work practices or the workplace that may have an impact on health and safety.

31 When and how consultation is to take place

(1) Consultation is required:

- (a) when risks to health and safety arising from work are assessed or when the assessment of those risks is reviewed; and
- (b) when decisions are made about the measures to be taken to eliminate or control those risks; and

- (c) when introducing or altering the procedures for monitoring those risks (including health surveillance procedures); and
 - (d) when decisions are made about the adequacy of facilities for the health or safety of workers; and
 - (e) when changes that may affect occupational health or safety are proposed to the workplace, workplace infrastructure or equipment, substances used in the course of work, or the systems or methods of work; and
 - (f) when decisions are made about the procedures for consultation; and
 - (g) in any other case prescribed by regulation.
- (2) Consultation may take place in 1 or more of the following ways:
- (a) with a health and safety committee representing the workers;
 - (b) with a health and safety representative representing the workers;

- (3) The employer's duty to consult does not justify a failure to implement, or delay in implementing, necessary risk management measures.

32 Worker's reciprocal duty in regard to consultation

A worker:

- (a) must participate in consultation initiated by the employer and must be prepared to contribute the worker's own insights to that consultation; and
- (b) must be open to suggestions made by the employer on health and safety issues; and
- (c) must bring to the employer's attention aspects of a particular work practice, or particular work, that appear to the worker to give rise to a risk to health or safety.

- (3) A workgroup is formed by agreement between the employer or employers concerned and the workers who are to be members of the proposed workgroup.
- (4) The agreement is to be sought, negotiated and evidenced as required by the regulations.
- (5) If an employer fails to start negotiations within 1 month after being asked to do so under subsection (2), or if negotiations do not result in the formation of a workgroup within 3 months after being started, the employer or a worker who is prospective member of the workgroup may, subject to the regulations, apply to the Authority for assistance in resolving the constitution of the workgroup.
- (6) On an application under subsection (5), the Authority may take any action it considers appropriate to resolve questions in issue and may itself decide how the workgroup is to be constituted and establish the workgroup.

35 Sharing of costs where there are multiple employers for a single work group

If a single work group consists of the workers of 2 or more employers, any costs and expenses of a health and safety representative that are to be borne by an employer under this Part are to be apportioned between the employers as agreed between them or, in default of agreement, equally.
