2 Entitlement for former Assembly member retiring involuntarily

- (1) For section 4(1A) of the Act, a former Assembly member retires involuntarily if the former member:
- (a) was first elected as an Assembly member at the general election held in 2005 or at a later election (the first election); and
  - (b) continues to be an Assembly member until, at an election (the later election), the former member ceases to be an Assembly member in prescribed circumstances; and
  - (c) is not entitled to receive payment of a pension or superannuation benefit related to the former member's office as an Assembly member immediately after ceasing to be an Assembly member.
- (2) For subregulation (1)(b), the prescribed circumstances are:
- (a) the former member is nominated as a candidate for an electoral division at the later election but is not elected; or
  - (b) the former member is not nominated as a candidate for the later election by the political party the former member represented at the first election otherwise than because of the former member's:
    - (i) expulsion from the party; or
    - (ii) misconduct, including, for example, conduct alleged to be prejudicial to the party or in contravention of its constitution.
- (3) The former Assembly member is taken to have retired involuntarily the day before the holding of the later election for the electoral division the former member represented.

3 Exceptions to Tribunal's power for Assembly member entitlements

- (2) However, subregulation (1) does not affect the Tribunal's powers relating to entitlements for establishing or maintaining an office in an Assembly member's electorate, including the following in relation to the office:
  - (a) office space;
  - (b) furniture and equipment;
  - (c) parking spaces;
  - (d) cleaning and utility services;
